PUBLISHED WEEKLY — PORTERVILLE, CALIFORNIA

PETER TEWKSBURY, one of Hollywood's top television show directors, and the man who originally organized the Barn Theater in Porterville, was in town over the November 11 weekend to visit his mother, Helen Clay, shown with him, and friends in the community. Tewksbury is now working on two new TV show series for release next year - one series starring Ann B. Davis, another Barn alumni; he also has an interest in a company to haul water to homes with dry wells - a project that he considers somewhat surer of financial success than new television shows. PETER TEWKSBURY DIRECTING TWO NEW TV SHOWS; BARN THEATER ALUMNI WORKING IN PRODUCTIONS

By Bill Rodgers

Some of the same people who organized Porterville's Barn Theater, and carried it through the trials and tribulations of its early years are getting together again, but this time it's in Hollywood and television is the medium.

In fact some of them have already established themselves in the "big time" television field - notably Peter Tewksbury first director and organizer of the Barn, and Ann B. Davis, a member of the Barn "nucleus" for several years. Both Ann and Pete are television Emmy award winners, Pete for his direction of "Father Knows Best", and Ann for her supporting part in "The Bob Cummings Show".

While in Porterville over the Homecoming weekend, Pete brought us up to date on his present work, which includes the production of two new television series for release next season, and the operation of a partnership company, established to haul water to people in his southern California neighborhood whose wells have gone dry.

"Of the two fields", Pete says, "the chance for profit is much surer in the water business these days. In fact, this water company was an immediate success. Porterville, you know, isn't the only community where wells are going dry."

Being filmed at Desilou studio is one of Pete's new shows, "R.

Editorial Comment

CONGRATULATIONS BOB OTTO

Winning isn't everything in high school football, but no one plays to lose, particularly Bob Otto, head coach of the unbeaten Porterville high school Class B team, that completed its 1961 season as a real champion outfit, at the top of its league.

Depending primarily on freshmen and sophomores, Otto put together a fine club — an aggressive and interesting club — that racked up wins over Arvin, Fresno, South Bakersfield, Tulare, Delano, Mt. Whitney of Visalia, Redwood of Visalia, and Hanford, while playing to a 6-6 tie with a strong East Bakersfield team.

Assisted by Bill Hatch and Bill Joos, Otto put a characteristic team on the field, a team that ran from multiple offensive formations, that played good defensive ball, that always had something new to spring when the chips were down — but perhaps most important, a team that acted like it wanted to play ball, and knew how to play ball.

Otto is in his seventh year as a football coach at Porterville high school, starting as an assistant Class C coach, taking over for a year as head class C coach, then, five years ago, moving in as top man of the Class B squad.

In capping his coaching career to date with his undefeated season, Otto, in five years, has compiled an impressive 32 won, 10 lost, and three tied record. And his biggest thrill, so he says, was when his boys beat Redwood of Visalia to sew up the league title this year.

So we say that winning in high school football isn't everything — but when a team wins consistently it indicates that a coach is getting the maximum out of his boys, and when boys play to the best of their abilities, or sometimes, maybe, a little over their heads, it means that they are developing not only as athletes, but as future solid citizens as well.

So our congratulations go to Coach Bob Otto, to his staff, and to those boys who did the job for him on the field this year.

B. and Myrnelene", which stars Miss Davis and co-stars Aldo Ray, former University of California football player. Script supervisor for this half-hour series is another Barn theater alumnus, Dave Weaver.

Second series — being produced as hour shows — is "Four To Go", with plot evolving around the adventures of four boys with a houseboat on the Ohio river. Pete spent considerable time in Marietta, Ohio, recently, writing the script for this show.

Working with Pete on both productions is Jim Leighton, who was with the Barn Theater Touring company a few years back.

To handle his television work, Pete has now set up his own company, "Knee Hill Productions", motto of the company being, "aqua nihil quid quid", which translates into "even nothing is something." Pete is president of the company, his father, Roger Tewksbury, is vice president, and another former Barn trouper, Max Jamison, now an attorney in Los Angeles, is secretary-treasurer.

"We old Barn theater people do things differently than the rest of Hollywood", Pete says, "but as long as they like us, and continue to pay us money, we'll go on like we are."

To which the obvious answer must be, "aqua nihil quid quid."

Meanwhile, watch for that name, Peter Tewksbury, on your television screen. You'll see it often, these days and nights.

Hodgson, Rodgers, Richard Owen and Roscoe Honeycutt were reelected to new, three-year terms on the board. Other directors are: Gilbert, Board, Bob Bennett, Guido Lombardi, and Merv Brown; three vacancies on the board will be filled in the immediate future.

Financial statement on the 1961 fair, prepared by Earl W. Reed, was presented to the board, with the statement indicating that while the fair operated in the black on paper, actual disbursements ran $1,442.16 over receipts; a new barn framework was added on the fair grounds for the 1961 fair as a capital outlay item.

In other business of the Monday meeting, general discussion centered around needed improvements for the 1962 fair; renewal of the fair contract for use of city of Porterville property; and possible additions to the 1962 fair activity program.

WONDERFUL, MISERABLE WEATHER

National Scene

by James W. Douthat

Washington, Nov. 23 — In discussing the failure of the 1961 session of Congress to approve more of the Kennedy legislative proposals, Sen. Mansfield of Montana, the Democratic leader, gave this explanation to his colleagues: "The country," he said, "had divided almost evenly on Nov. 8 (election day) and the majority party in Congress did not command the numbers required for a sense of divine mission."

This explanation provides one of the major reasons for the current series of White House regional conferences — and for President Kennedy's political activity in connection with elections in New York, New Jersey and Texas.

Democrats are hoping that the election successes will stimulate more congressional votes for Kennedy proposals — and also will lead to greater victories in the 1962 congressional and 1964 presidential and congressional elections.

Republicans, however, are pointing out that in these and other elections throughout the nation the number of votes they received showed a substantial increase over recent years — and that this heralded important future gains in party strength.

Only the election returns in 1962 and 1964 can prove who is right — but, in the meantime, both parties are contending that more intense activity can be made to pay attractive dividends in later years.

There also is no way at this time to determine the effectiveness of the White House regional conferences.

The outcome will depend, to a very great extent, on the relative effectiveness of the proponents and opponents of the Kennedy proposals in presenting their viewpoint to the public and to members of the Senate and House.

Persons attending the conferences say that administration spokesmen emphasized that the Kennedy program already had done a great deal for the people and that much more would be forthcoming in the future — provided the President received the support he desired.

Many purely local responsibilities would be taken over by the federal government, under the Kennedy proposals. It was disclosed that federal subsidies are under consideration for even such local functions as commuter fares and parking facilities in connection with commuter trains.

Support was solicited for a number of Kennedy-backed measures which are certain to arouse vigorous controversy during the 1962 congressional session.

These include: creation of a new Cabinet Department of Urban Affairs and Housing, an increase in Social Security

Frontiers Of America Series For Children

Two series worthy of note for elementary age children are: The Frontiers of America series and the First Book series. Both these have easy reading in a simple lively text giving accurate readable information.

HUNTERS BLAZE THE TRAILS by Edith McCall is a title in the Frontiers of America Series. Here are the stories of the hunters who opened the westward trails for the settlers that followed. Stories of Davy Crockett, Kit Carson and Bill Cody to name a few are more exciting than fiction. Other titles in this series are: HEROES OF WESTERN OUTPOSTS; MEN ON IRON HORSES; EXPLORERS IN A NEW WORLD.

A new title in the First Book series is FIRST BOOK OF THE MEDITERRANEAN by Gerald Gottlieb. This is the story of the Mediterranean from the days when ancient men first set out in frail little ships to the present luxurious tourist ships and diesel-powered cargo boats. Others in this series include: THE FIRST BOOK OF THE SOVIET UNION; THE FIRST BOOK OF INDIA; THE FIRST BOOK OF CONGRESS.

A new title in juvenile fiction is ISLAND CITY; ADVENTURES IN OLD NEW YORK by Lavinia R. Davis. Five stories telling of Indian uprisings, pirates and Revolutionary War intrigue relate a great city's development from 1660 to 1780. Focusing on the youngest members of five generations of the Townsend and Rikers families, the episodes recreate the fears, the fun and fantasy of lively young New Yorkers. This is authentic and flavorful fare in a well-written book.

THE BLUE BOAT by William Mayne is an intermingling of fantasy and reality. Exploring a lake and its islands in a forbidden wood, two small boys enter into a magic world. This charming story is told with humor and originality.

We Only Heard

BY BILL RODGERS

DULL, POORLY prepared and much too long was the talk delivered by Harold Angier at annual dinner meeting of the Tulare County Farmers' association last week in Exeter. Mr. Angier, who is executive vice president of the California Grape and Tree Fruit league, is no doubt a capable and well-informed man in his field, but on the basis of his performance at Exeter, his field is not after-dinner speaking . . . We are often amazed and disturbed when we attend meetings in which agriculture is attempting to put its best foot forward, but succeeds only in putting its foot in its mouth. At Exeter there was quite an array of newspaper, television, and radio reporters present by invitation; here was a chance to give the boys of the press a real charge that they could pass along to their readers and listeners. Here was a chance to actually do the thing that men in agriculture talk so much about — the creation of better public relations for agriculture. And here was a chance also for the association to do a job of selling to the goodly number of farmers, and their ladies, who attended the meeting. But the chance was missed; around the room too many heads were nodding, too many eyes were being held open by obvious effort . . . Which disturbs us. We want agriculture to look good; when men speak for agriculture, we want them to speak well; and may we suggest that it's past time that agricultural leaders realize that position and ability in a specific field do not necessarily make a competent public speaker . . . When agriculture is to be put on display in a public meeting, it should present its best speakers, not necessarily its high titles.

BEFORE THE clash of political battle drowns out whatever words of wisdom that might be spoken in the 1962 campaigns, may we call to attention certain facts of political life — at least these things seem to us to be facts after some 15 years on the partisan political front: 1. No single man, regardless of what position he is elected to, no legislative body, national or state, will change the course of the nation, the state, or the economy over night, except, in case of an extreme national emergency, and even in this case, the change will not be a permanent thing. 2. Granting that statement No. 1 is true, then it follows that real significance of an elected office holder's actions, or actions of a legislative body, lies in the trend that the individual or the legislative body takes. 3. Granting that statements No. 1 and No. 2 tie together, then it becomes extremely important that we know what candidates for public office really think, what their basic political philosophy really is, since their decisions as office holders will generally be based on their ideas and philosophies, and it is their decisions that determine the long-term trend of the nation and of the economy. 4. We should know what our own, personal basic political thinking and philosophy really is, we should appraise our political thinking on a basis of historic and economic fact as to its eventual consequences without rationalizing our way into something that we don't really believe; then we should vote for the man who comes closest to believing as we do.

THE ETERNAL JOURNAL VISUALIZED AS THE "NEW YORKER" OF THE WEST BY MEMBERS OF PURPLE I SOCIETY

Although many literary ideas are born to blush unseen, this was not the case of "The Eternal Journal", a Porterville high school publication that started and thrived during the past school year, first as a somewhat frowned upon off-campus activity, then as an authorized campus medium of original expression.

Power behind the Journal is Jim Joannides, who visualizes the publication as the "New Yorker of the West," and who philosophizes that "The Eternal Journal is forever and forever"; he clarifies this statement by saying that he saw a mimeograph machine and the idea for The Eternal Journal popped into his head.

But while the interior contents of the Journal has remained a mimeograph production, the cover has moved into the realm of printing, with photographs, mostly by Joannides, featured. And in the last issue of the last school year, the cover went into two colors.

The Journal boasts a staff of 30 members, "all one happy, unpaid family", and since the Journal got the official nod, after the school administration perhaps adopted a policy of "if you can't beat 'em, join 'em", Phillip Starr has been the faculty advisor.

The Journal is published by the Purple I Society; it sells for 10 cents per copy; it is operating in the black; in spite of a price rise from 5c to 10c it has a constantly increasing demand from high school students (as well as from elementary students who are in the know); its news reporting is strictly editorialized, and, as Joannides says, "it is the birthplace of controversial literature."

The publication carries stories on Eternal Persons on the high school campus; it often views situations and people Through the Eternal Eye; it has delved into life after death, featuring in pictures an old Packard hearse; and it carried reports of such things as: "On Sin and Champagne", "On Life", "Of Arrows, Softball and Track", "To 'E' Or Not to 'E'", and "On Death and Dick Clark".

The Eternal Journal has national circulation. One subscription goes to Frank LaTourette, of the ABC news department in New York City.

"He's my Uncle Frank," says Joannides.

As for the future, the Purple I Society is considering launching The Eternal Journal into state and national affairs, and there is talk of expanding from the literary field into the field of theater arts.

In its early days, when the publication was sold only in the better gutters, students snapped it up, but certain adults considered it just a bit off beat. (Some of them still do.)

And from the adult standpoint, some of the Journal's free expression still misses the point. But at the same time, some of its comments and observations have real humor; particularly in the field of photography there is often excellent humor and satire. Staff members of the Journal emphasize that it is not competitive with the school's official newspaper publication, the "Orange and Green"; the Journal merely goes on to greater, or at least different, heights in the area of creative expression.

Our own editorial opinion is that Porterville high school administrators made a wise move when they decided to encourage, not discourage The Eternal Journal. All too often teenagers with ideas that are a little off the beaten track are "stomped on"; yet it is today's teenagers with ideas who will become adults with ideas in the future. And we do need ideas, you know.

It is doubtful that The Eternal Journal has, as yet, cut into the west coast circulation of The New Yorker. But who knows—The Eternal Journal is only starting its second year.

A SOMEWHAT typical picture page from "The Eternal Journal", a publication of original expression that saw the light of literary day on the Porterville high school campus during the last school year. After some discussion concerning such things as editorial and business policy, decision to continue the Journal has been reached, and first edition of the current school year will be off the presses next Wednesday, November 29.

Reduce Fire Hazards, Keep Areas Weed Free with Soil Sterilants

Apply soil sterilants now for controlling vegetation around buildings, pumps, fences, utility poles, roadsides, ditchbanks and all non-farm areas. Keep property smart looking and reduce danger of fire by using long-lasting soil sterilants from Niagara.

Right now is an excellent time to apply Karmex or Telvar for long-lasting control of annual weeds. Chlorea or Chlorax "40" may be used when deep rooted perennials, such as morning glory or Johnson grass, are present. Utilize fall and winter rains to carry the sterilant down into the root zone.

Niagara soil sterilants can be applied in either liquid or dry form, whichever is most economical. Because Niagara soil sterilants prevent growth of all plants, seedlings are killed and the controlled areas will remain weed-free. High-cost shoveling and hoeing are eliminated.

For best results in selecting and applying the proper soil sterilant, see your Niagara Field Representative or call Niagara at SU 4-6795

WAITING FOR inspiration are these editors on the staff of The Eternal Journal, from left, Caroline Cox, Jim Joannides, Jeff Frost, and Holly Patmore. First edition of the Journal for the current school year will be on the street next Wednesday, November 29, with eager readers able to obtain copies (for 10 cents, that is) at Cobb Drug, the Porterville-Pioneer Hotel newsstand, Edwards Studio, Cole's Clothing store, and, of course, on the Porterville high school campus.

PANTHERS SHOW FLASHES OF POWER, BUT WERE INCONSISTANT

Porterville's 1961 football season ended on a winning, if somewhat frosty note Friday night at Jamison Stadium as the PUHS Panthers evaded pure mediocrity with a 41-0 blasting of weak Hanford. The win gave the Panthers a season record of 5-3-1 and a Central Yosemite League standing of 2-2-1.

In reviewing the Panther's season we remember flashes of power and occasional brilliance. The only thing consistent about the PUHS varsity was inconsis-ency. They opened the season with a sputtering win over Arvin and the following week grabbed a last minute win over Fresno on a fluke pass completion. Then the Panthers met the East Bakersfield Blades on the local grounds and had little trouble with the offenseless oil city eleven. The following week the Panthers took their shiny 3-0 record to Bakersfield for an encounter with the equally undefeated South High Rebels. The Panthers found the Rebs thoroughly enjoying this 100th year since the start of the Civil War and played kitten while South High's fine running backs had a field day in trouncing the locals. The next week CYL competition started as PUHS traveled to Tulare for the league opener. The Redskins took advantage of Panther errors and penalties to pin the second consecutive loss on the fading orange and green. The humiliation of the Redskin defeat stung, and the following week the Panthers were fired-up as they played what was probably their best game of the season, scoring a convincing win over tough Delano.

Mineral King Bowl in Visalia was the scene of the Panther's next outing, and it was again the old story as the locals amassed a fine rushing total, and beat the Mt. Whitney Pioneers in everything but scoring. It was a standoff in that department, as the game ended in a 12-12 deadlock. Redwood High's powder-blue Rangers came to town the next week and had little trouble handing the Panthers' loss number three. The season finale was played last week and the boys needed the big win to cap an otherwise lack-luster season.

But PUHS had its bright side of the gridiron picture. The Bob Otto-coached Cubs rammed through their nine game schedule without a loss. The only blemish on the Cub's record was tie with East Bakersfield.

The fate of the B class football player is, and always will be, that of playing in the shadow of the almighty varsity. It is often a thankless job as the B games usually start with just a handful of spectators observing their efforts. Later on, as the crowd begins to gather for the "big" game they get a few ho-hum cheers if things are going right. Because the boys are a little smaller people tend to take the "B" games lightly and with less enthusiasm. But those few who have bothered to drop around early in recent years have found that Mr. Otto's boys play good football that is great to watch. And, more important, we think that they like to play the game.

Porterville College had little to cheer about during the past season, but there was a definite improvement. In posting a 3-5-1 record the Pirates proved that the will was still there.

Pat Mills' boys brought exciting football back to Jamison Stadium with their wide-open offense and we think that it will get much better next year. The Mills-coached T-formation included split centers, quarterbacks chatting with fullbacks, and split second pitch-outs that made the game thoroughly interesting.

With another year and a few more horses the Porterville Pirates will be hard to beat.

YOUR LEGISLATOR AT WORK!

Senator

J. Howard Williams

32nd District

California State Legislature

California's population explosion is having its effect even on hunting and fishing. At its recent hearing, the Senate Fact Finding Committee on Natural Resources considered several fish and game problems, most of which have been enlarged by the huge increases in the number of hunters and fishers.

One perennial problem taken up is that of damages to private property caused by hunters and fishermen. Property owners are particularly harassed by their inability to secure reimbursement for such damage. The committee was informed that as a result, many owners are posting their land to prohibit entry for hunting or fishing. It was pointed out that this action only increases the sports population pressure on other available lands.

The group was told that present law is considered sufficient to protect landholders from trespass or damage, and also contains provisions under which they may recover compensation for damage. Specific language in both the Penal and Fish and Game Codes was cited, and one case was mentioned, in which two rabbit hunters who killed two cows and badly damaged a water tank by using it for target practice, were forced to pay several hundred dollars to the property owner. The spokesman for the department of fish and game therefore recommended against any new law in the field.

Members of the committee, however, maintained that present law is not an adequate answer to the problem. It was said that water tanks and fuel tanks on farm equipment have become favorite targets for acts of vandalism, and also that damage is not confined to that caused by firearms, because fishermen, who carry none, are known to have damaged gates and fences. It was further pointed out that it is practically impossible for the property owner to apprehend a sportsman who causes damage, so the chances for reimbursement are very slight.

MARTIN BROONES, Christian Science lecturer from Beverly Hills, will deliver a free public lecture on how to cope effectively through prayer with problems of any kind at the Porterville Christian Science church auditorium, Thursday evening, December 14.

It was indicated that owners might be more willing to open their lands to hunters and fishermen if there was assurance that any damage would be paid for. One tentative suggestion offered was that fish and game funds, which are raised entirely from license fees, be used to pay for such damage. This was opposed by the representative of organized sportsmen.

Another possibility was discussed. This was that every hunter or fisherman be encouraged or required to take out liability insurance to cover any damage he might cause. This idea was better received by the spokesman for the nimrod group, and it was understood that the availability of such insurance would be further investigated.

Earlier the department representative had stated that such insurance had once been offered by a sportsmen's group to its members, but that the program had been abandoned for an unknown reason. It was stated that such protection would be expensive, and therefore very likely to be resisted by license buyers.

A closely related matter is the advisability of enacting legislation which would permit the suspension of hunting or fishing privileges for trespass on private property. Here again, the committee was informed that present law is sufficient. It was said that to provide such suspension for trespass alone could lead to abuse and would often be too severe. California's current trespass law is regarded as one of the tightest in the nation, it was declared.

Other topics brought up included the financing of screens across the intakes of water division channels to protect dish-life, and the question of free licenses for special groups.

We Only Heard

UNFORTUNATELY, ELECTIONS nowadays seem to hinge to a great degree on many false factors: A happy smile, a good TV personality, a quick quip, a promise of handouts, a gift of gab, a part in the hair, machine organization, blind allegiance to a political party. Seldom indeed does a voter really appraise a candidate on his ability, his background, his record in his private business, his record as an elected official, his basic political philosophy — yet these are some of the things that really count, for it is from knowledge of these things that we decide whether or not the man we elect will influence the trend of the nation, or the state along the political lines that we as an individual have thought out as being best for the republic.

AS WE say, we mention these things now before the firing starts on the political battle line. We hope that in 1962 "we the people" pay less attention to the part in the hair, and more attention to what's under it.

taxes to provide compulsory medical care for the elderly, federal subsidies for school construction and teachers' salaries, a tax credit for business investment coupled with the closing of so-called tax "loopholes," federalization of the state unemployment compensation system, federal training and retraining programs, and lower tariffs.

Participants were urged to write President Kennedy whatever thoughts they may have as to what the Government should be doing. Assurance was given that their ideas would be given careful consideration.

Republicans contended that the conferences were purely political and the expenses should not be saddled on the taxpayers.

For example, Rep. Wilson, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, cited the keynote address of Attorney General Kennedy in Chicago as "proof of the real purpose behind these publicly-financed political junkets."

"The President's younger brother," Rep. Wilson said in a formal statement, "gave his audience a glowing and one-sided account of what he imagines the New Frontier has accomplished and made an open pitch for all phases of the administration's big-spending legislative program."

Attorney General Kennedy maintained that the conferences were "non-partisan."

There was considerable laughter, however—in which the Attorney General joined—when he added that: "We want to keep politics out of this."

Classes On Isms And Government Are Being Held

PORTERVILLE, Nov. 23 — A series of classes and discussions on communism, socialism, constitutional U.S. government, and free enterprise are being held every two weeks at the First Baptist church, with next sessions set for 3 p.m., December 3, and 7:30 p.m., December 4. The public is invited to attend without charge.

Factual material is presented in printed form, on tape recordings and by motion picture. Further information above the classes, and how to obtain tapes or motion pictures for organization meetings can be obtained from Dr. James E. Williams, Jr., of Porterville.

Grape production in California for 1961 is forecast at 2,855,000 tons, six per cent above last year. Wine varieties are down five per cent; table varieties are down 20 per cent; raisin varieties are up 18 per cent.

VINEYARD OF a century ago will be restored by the state of California at the Sonoma home of the last Mexican commandant of California, General Mariano Vallejo (inset). The vineyard of his Lachryma Montis estate (shown as sketched after its 1851 founding) was a forerunner of the modern California grape and wine industry observing its Centennial this year. Now a state museum, the buildings and gardens are well preserved. The vineyard restoration is the first move toward putting the surrounding soil to the same use it had under Vallejo. It will be a "mother vineyard", producing disease-free planting stock for California wine growers and vineyardists. Vallejo, who surrendered to the Bear Flag rebellion in 1846, was a close friend of Agoston Haraszthy, the father of modern California wine growing. The general founded both the cities of Sonoma and Santa Rosa, and was the first state-elect from Sonoma county.

WHEELER'S CAREER AS A JURIST IS STOPPED BEFORE IT STARTS

A FEW WEEKS AGO, through the courtesy of the U.S. Mail, we received a nicely worded invitation. This was not an invitation to a fancy ball or a Soiree at Mrs. Gotrocks, but rather an invitation to come down to the Justice court and do our duty as a juror. What was particularly impressive was the fine print on the invitation stating that failure to show would cause a citation for contempt of court. This is very contemptible, indeed, and also very persuasive.

ON THE APPOINTED DAY, your correspondent stalked into into the court in his finest jurisprudence mood. The seats were fairly teeming with furtive and bewildered looking citizens, who laid looked as if they would enjoy being someplace else. This manner seems to be par for a panel of jurors. We joined the throng and took on the protective coloring of bewilderment.

THE MINUTES TICKED BY, and despite the new furniture in the local hall of justice, we found that wooden benches were hard as ever. Finally, various officials began assembling, and a certain order began to be felt. These people, at least, knew what they were doing.

AFTER A FEW OFFICIAL pronouncements, the wheels of justice began to turn. The Constable officiated at the grab bag and drew out the names of prospective jurors. As each name was called, the lucky choice climbed into the jury box and tried to look official. In spite of the odds against it, your correspondent was chosen on the seventh grab. We took our place in the box and made the pleasant discovery that the upholstery here was considerably softer.

FINALLY, THERE WERE twelve of us assembled in the box. This was the signal for the lawyers to have their innings. There were two on hand, each armed with a formidable sheaf of notes and briefs. One of these gentlemen exhorted us to be fair and unprejudiced. In fact, he suggested that we make our minds a blank and only register pertinent facts and directives from the bench.

YOUR CORRESPONDENT immediately tried to put on his best blank look. Now normally this comes easy. Especially when our ever-loving suggests she buy a new party dress. But, to consciously look blank when in a jury box is a very difficult proposition. We tried to achieve this by studying the opposite wall which was also blank, but it was a very unrewarding pastime. Finally, the questioning got around to yours truly. The lawyers discovered where I worked and a few other random facts, but I think they were secretly studying my capacity for blankness.

SOMETHING. A TWITCH of the eyelid, a shrug of the shoulder, something betrayed me. When the time came for challenges, which is a polite way of

SUPREME BUSHFACE CARROLL SIMMONS THANKS MEMBERS, AND ORGANIZATIONS, FOR ASSISTANCE IN CENTENNIAL YEAR

PORTERVILLE, NOV. 23—Supreme Bushface Carroll Simmons, now the Past Supreme of the Mystic Knights of the Supreme Order of Bushfaces, this week issued a "thank you" to members and organizations who worked with the organization during Porterville's Centennial observance. Simmons' statement follows:

With the observance of our great Centennial year in Porterville, now history, and with most of the Bushfaces shorn of their distinguished beards, it is time to thank many organizations and individuals for their wonderful cooperation and participation which made it possible for the Centennial Mystic Knights of the Supreme Order of Bushfaces to be among the leaders of the many groups that so faithfully participated in carving a great niche in history for the city of Porterville.

In full realization of the hazards one faces trying to recall all of the people who are deserving of thanks, I wish to state now that if anyone's name is inadvertently left out, it most certainly is unintentional.

First of all the 131 members of the Bushface organization deserve a lot of recognition for their individual efforts, personal sacrifice, and considerable inconvenience at times to make the Centennial Mystic Knights of the Supreme Order of Bushfaces the liveliest organization in Porterville during 1961. Many of the members served on special committees such as the ritualistic, ways and means, and feed committees, and my special thanks goes to all of these members.

The following individuals, civic and fraternal organizations, made cash donations to help purchase the 1917 model T Ford won by Lonnie Swearingen as the grand prize for the best beard. The American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Orange Belt Saddle club, Rotary club, Elks lodge, Breakfast Lions club and Ed. Jones.

Thanks also to the Fraternal Order of Eagles, who donated the use of their lodge hall for our regular meetings; the Security First National bank for their help and cooperation in opening up the M.K.s. of the S.O.Bs.' bank account; the Mountain Lion, where so many spontaneous meetings were held, and where powder burns so conspicuously adorn the ceiling to attest the lively times enjoyed there; The Farm Tribune, the Porterville Evening Recorder, the Fresno Bee, Radio Stations KTIP, KMJ and KCOK, and TV station KERO for their fine coverage of all Bushface events; Al Hilton, Edwards studio, Hammond studio, and Porterville studio for the hundreds of pictures taken at meetings, parades and in their studios.

Last, but by no means least, we want to pay special tribute to the only member of the opposite sex who became an honorary member of the Mystic Knights of the Supreme Order of Bushfaces, that vivacious, buxom redhead, Diamond Lil, the envy of every DOLL and the champion of the Bushfaces.

Therefore, on behalf of the Centennial Mystic Knights of the Supreme Order of Bushfaces, I wish to express a most sincere "thanks" to all of you.

My only regret is that I will not be here for the next one in 2061.

The recent rains have brought broad smiles to local folk and even those that don't drink the stuff seem happy to see the water return. Of course it has been this dry before because old timers tell us it was necessary to run Tule River water through a ringer to get any moisture out of it and even then there were times when it came out only wet on one side.

It is pleasant to have everything washed off clean and the summer dust removed from the air. People and plants both appear to take a new lease on life and the fall colors are accentuated to even greater brightness. You should take time from Thanksgiving festivities to drive around admiring this show of color. Especially if the sink is full of turkey bones and dirty dishes.

We have to admit this is lousy weather for gardeners but there is a certain amount of satisfaction in raking leaves and cleaning out the last dead posies. At least that's what it says in the various garden books. We would rather sit by the fire and think about some high Sierra lake which for some reason looks pretty even if no one rakes the leaves.

However if your wife is getting restless you had better go by the book and enjoy a little leaf raking. It'll shake down the mashed potato and make room for the pumpkin pie anyway. Afterwards you can return to the fire and think about the pruning and such you can do next month.

Happy Thanksgiving.

CHapel CHIMES

By Rev. N. J. Thompson

A 900 foot bell tower is to be added to Washington Cathedral. At least $25 million will be spent before this great cathedral is completed.

I could never worship there. Sitting on those plush seats and listening to the music from the $2 million carillon tower, I'd be seeing, instead of ties and tails, swarms of naked, hungry children holding out empty rice bowls. I'd be thinking about the one billion children in the world today, two-thirds of whom go to bed hungry every night.

I'd be thinking, too, of the missionaries enduring heat, hardship, and disease in strange lands to bring the light and life of the Gospel to those dying in pagan darkness. Often these gallant soldiers of the Cross lack weapons. They lack Scriptures, and medicine and clothing. With radio, they could reach additional multitudes of needy souls. But their mission board says, "No funds available."

Can we send these missionaries a dollar? Or have we spent all our money on stately cathedrals? I could not worship in that cathedral without thinking of the 50 million American boys and girls who never go to church and never hear the name of Jesus except in blasphemy.

I'm concerned about these youngsters. They are our leaders of tomorrow. Many of them are tainted by corrupt socialist and communist propaganda. Without Christ, without the

DORIS KARSTAEDT, who killed her first deer when she was 16 years old, is shown above with a "trophy head" from the Jarbidge river country in Nevada. Doris scored a heart shot at more than 300 yards after her husband, Dr. Bob Karstaedt, and Leo Point had both missed. Doris was using a .270 rifle with scope. In the party also was Les Sammann; they brought back four deer. (Farm Tribune photo)

Bible, without faith in God, where will they lead our nation?

Fifty thousand home missionaries, and a nation-wide Gospel radio program, are urgently needed to win these children to God. They must be taught the meaning of true liberty, and righteousness, and Godliness. Otherwise there is danger of the bell in that tower being stilled, and the cathedral lights going out forever.
